

Rep. John Campbell's office is encouraging residents to check out the congressman's newly revamped website, which includes changes he hopes will improve constituent access to legislation, services, and state and district information. "Our new website provides visitors with information they need a... Rep. John Campbell's office is encouraging residents to check out the congressman's newly revamped website, which includes changes he hopes will improve constituent access to legislation, services, and state and district information.

"Our new website provides visitors with information they need about Congress and the latest happenings in Washington," Campbell said in a news release.

Constituents can now view video of Campbell's floor speeches, interviews with reporters and some of the congressman's weekly "laptop reports" he hopes will give residents an inside view of Washington politics.

Readers can check out the website at <http://campbell.house.gov/>.